ARBITRATION SHIELD

What is arbitration

Arbitration is a dispute resolution process conducted by a neutral arbitrator who will hear and determine on a moving claim in a faster and far less expensive manner than traditional litigation. The parties involved in the dispute submit their relevant information to the arbitrator who will review their dispute and issue a final decision that is binding on both parties.

Arbitration is a process designed to settle or make a determination on a dispute, and to resolve the specific issues submitted by the parties. Unlike litigation, arbitration is private, only between the two parties, and informal. In arbitration, the rules of evidence do not apply, and there are no subpoenas, depositions or other discovery processes. The arbitration costs are based on the amount of the claim, as set forth in the program guidelines.

Arbitration under this program is optional and voluntary for you, but not so for your mover.

Your mover must agree to your request for arbitration of disputed claims of $10,000 or less, if no settlement can be reached. However, if you request arbitration of a disputed claim over $10,000, your claim will be submitted to arbitration only if both you and your mover agree to arbitration.

Once both you and your mover have paid your fees and submitted your dispute briefs to Gogo Mediation for resolution, a hearing will be scheduled and a neutral arbitrator will make a final decision. The arbitrator's decision is legally binding on both parties and can be enforced in any court having jurisdiction over the dispute. Under federal law, if the arbitration decision is disputed, the disputing party may in certain circumstances be liable to pay the other party's legal fees.

The arbitrator may issue a decision based on what he or she feels is just and appropriate within the scope of the contractual agreement between you and your mover. In reaching a decision, the arbitrator will likely consider applicable laws, the agreement, and the provisions of any tariff, as well as applicable practices of the moving industry.

Under the law, the arbitrator only has jurisdiction to consider loss or damage to household goods which were transported by the mover, disputed additional service-related charges assessed by the mover in addition to those collected at delivery, or such other disputes arising out of the transportation of the household goods that are mutually agreed upon, in writing, by both parties.

When to request arbitration

Before arbitration can be offered you must be sure that you have exhausted your options through the mover's standard claims process and that the mover has made its final offer to you.

Disputes which qualify for arbitration are claims that are the result of: [1] loss or damage to articles contained in your shipment, or [2] additional charges that were billed to you by your mover after the delivery of your shipment was made.

For example, if you received a non-binding estimate from your mover for $7,000, you would be required to pay no more than 110% of this amount (or $7,700) at delivery for the services included in your estimate and quantities (weight) listed on your estimate.

The amount billed to you after delivery is the only amount subject to arbitration.

Disputes involving other types of claims may be arbitrated under the program only if both you and your mover agree to do so.

ARBITRATION SHIELD User Guide

How to request arbitration

If you disagree with the final results of your claim, you may send a written request for arbitration by email to arbitration@csipros.org.

You must request arbitration within 90 days after your mover (or anyone on their behalf) has made its final written settlement offer or denial of your claim.

The process

Once we receive your request to proceed with arbitration you will be sent the Arbitration Request Form along with a link to Gogo Mediation's portal. Upon receipt of the written request to arbitrate we will notify your mover of your request to proceed with arbitration. Gogo Mediation will then send you the login email with specific instructions required to proceed with filing and paying for arbitration. You will have 7 days to submit payment and 15 days from the date of payment to submit your brief to Gogo Mediation. Then your mover will submit its brief and its portion of the arbitration fee. Gogo Mediation will then notify you via email of the date of the hearing. Hearings are scheduled within 30-35 days of receiving the payments.

An Arbitrator's decision resolving a dispute may include remedies appropriate under the circumstances, including repair, replacement, refund reimbursement for expenses, compensation for damages, and an order requiring the payment of additional carrier charges.

The decision made by the arbitrator will be sent to you and to your carrier and will be kept confidential. Federal law prohibits an interstate carrier or its agents from disclosing information about your shipment without your permission except in response to legal proceedings and court orders. CSI respects your right to privacy and will keep any information it has about your arbitration case confidential.

How much does it cost

The cost to arbitration is based on the total amount of the claim in dispute and is split evenly between you and your mover as follows:

Amount Claimed: $1 - $10,000 Fee: $700
Amount Claimed: $10,000 and up Fee: $900

For Example, if the amount of the dispute is $7,500, the applicable fee would be $700. This fee would be shared between the parties with you and your mover each paying $350.

If the claimed dispute amount is $15,000 then the applicable fee would be $900, both parties paying $450.

The arbitrator may apportion the fee as part of the final award by determining which party shall pay the cost or a portion of the cost of the arbitration proceeding, including the cost of initiating the arbitration process.

In other words, the arbitrator may decide to refund all, a portion or none of your arbitration fee, depending on the circumstances of your dispute.

Can I appeal the arbitration?

The arbitration decision cannot be appealed. You can make a request for a reconsideration to have the current submitted evidence re-reviewed through Gogo Mediation and pay the applicable fee. The decision of the arbitrator is binding on both you and your mover.

Who we are

CSI is a third-party claims company that helps movers and their customers reach a fast and fair resolution for their household moving claims. When a settlement cannot be reached through the claims process, customers may request to proceed with arbitration.

CSI offers the Arbitration Shield through Gogo Mediation. Gogo Mediation is not affiliated with CSI or with any household goods moving companies and is a completely autonomous corporation designed by its creators to swiftly, fairly, amicably and inexpensively settle disputes between customers and movers.

Gogo Mediation started in 2022 and is a national alternative dispute resolution services firm that is dedicated to making professional problem-solving accessible to everyone. Founded by a civil trial attorney with almost 2 decades of experience, Gogo's team of skilled neutrals from across the country is here to resolve conflicts in a fair, efficient, and cost-effective manner.

Gogo Mediation charges a fee to arbitrate your dispute. The fee, which is split evenly between the parties, is paid to Gogo Mediation directly; CSI does not receive any portion of the fee.

Neither CSI nor any of its employees take any role in the arbitration proceedings or has any influence on the outcome of the arbitrator's decision. CSI simply serves as the referral agent for its carrier clients to assure that requests for arbitration reach the offices of Gogo Mediation.
